Bio

Samaila Suleiman is a lecturer in History, Bayero University, Kano. He received his PhD from the University of Cape Town in 2015. Samaila is a recipient of many prestigious fellowships: two-time Next Generation Social Sciences in Africa Dissertation Fellow of the Social Science Research Council (SSRC), Fellow Johannesburg Workshop in Theory and Criticism Fellowship (JWTC) University of Witswatersrand, Fellow Brown International Advanced Research Institutes (BIARI) at Brown University USA, Postdoctoral Fellow African Humanities Program (AHP) of the American Council of Learned Societies (ACLS), Fellow African Peace-building Network (APN) SSRC, African Studies Association/American Council of Learned Societies (ASA/ACLS) Presidential Fellow 2018, and Fellow Summer Program in Social Sciences at the Institute for Advanced Study (IAS) Princeton USA. His research lies at the intersection between historiography, nationalism, identity politics and conflicts. His latest publications include “Ethnic Minorities and the Dynamics of Heritage Politics in Nigeria”, Unpacking Heritage: Things don’t really exist until you give them a name, Mkuki Na Nyota, Dar es Salam, eds. Rachael Lee, Diane Barbe, Phillip Misselwitz, 2018; “The Nigerian History Machine”, Theories of History: History Read Across the Humanities, eds. Michael J. Kelly and Arthur Rose, Bloomsbury, London, 2018; “What will you do with History?”: A Memoir”, The consequences of being a Historian: Thoughts and Reflections from Practitioners and Students of History ed. Aminu I. Yandaki.